Runners and Chasers by Peter Gau

The second day of Sun and Wind began with the camp making their way out to the athletic fields for a game that we like to call Runners and Chasers. The goal is to evade the other team and take as much time for each person to get tagged as possible. The square playing field is cut in two by a diagonal line of defensive players, pointing in opposite directions. The runner’s job is to evade the chasing team by weaving through the line and avoiding getting tagged by the ever-changing chaser (chasers cannot cross the line and instead must tap-in a fellow teammate facing in the right direction). When asked, NATHAN PRIESTNER admitted it’s: “really confusing and I don’t know what’s about to happen.” There were many impressive runs and tags alike, with highlights from ISAAC MILLER and SAM MYERTHALL (each evading the chasing team for a considerable amount of time), JACKSON PURCELL and CHARLIE

EISENBERG (who made several diving tags for his team). In the end, the Sun team was able to take the win by only a few minutes.

Musical Chairs by Gavin Pritchard

With the rain showing no sign of letting up, WOODY and the Sun and Wind czars planned a fun indoor event – Musical Chairs! Unfortunately, the counselors were unable to play in this event due to space restrictions. But that was not going to stop them from having fun as the music played and the chairs dropped while the rounds progressed. Throughout the game, accusations of favoritism and rigging were flying from both the Sun and Wind teams. The Sun team went as far as calling WOODY a potential accomplice to the crime. As the game inched closer to its end, SPENCER AUSLANDER of the Sun team and MAX AGINS of the Wind were the final players left in the game. While the final two players circled the last remaining chair, the music abruptly stopped, and MAX AGINS was the one left in the chair. As the Wind team realized they were victorious, cheers erupted, and the team closed in on MAX to celebrate!

NOAH SHERMAN and CHARLIE EISENBERG get heated as to who the chair belongs to.

Capture the Flag Sun and Win

Edition by the Editor

Capture the Flag is a first night staple here at Menominee. It's always played in the gully, and it is a phenomenal way to get everybody excited and moving on night one. But it's for these reasons why we treat Sun and Wind Capture the Flag differently. For one thing, counselors are playing this time around and the administration are the mosquitos refereeing the game. This game is also played on the golf course beyond Woody's Pitch, and before Ingram's Pitch (as the area is more well known as). The first round of the game went at a steady pace right until the end. After ten minutes, both teams had gotten into the flag circle but neither had made significant movement to the goal line. Suddenly, SPENCER AUSLANDER of the Sun team made an unbelievable run, in which he took the flag all the way to the goal line from the first quarter of the field. Going into game two, both teams had made it within fifteen yards from the goal line and could guarantee a throw that would make it over the defenders. The Wind team acted quicker, as JACK BEHAR threw a perfect pass to MATTHEW HARFIELD securing them the round and tying the game up at 1-1. The game was a best of three, meaning the next round would be the final factor. In the last round, both teams got close to the line but missed their throws, meaning the flag was reset back to the original circle. Out of nowhere, JOEY HAZAN of the Wind team secured the lead by grabbing the flag and running halfway to the goal line. The Wind steadily inched forward, but it was too little too late because JAVIER FLORES of the Sun team picked up the flag and dodged defenders left and right to take the victory for his team. Congratulations to the Sun team on their win!

British Bulldogs

 by Alec Schwartz

To cap off the Sun and Wind festivities, the teams participated in a fan favorite game, British Bulldogs. The stakes were as high as ever since the score of the overall competition was 3-3 going into this game. The first game proved to be a battle with the Wind winning the first game in the best of three series with a score of 21-17. With the Wind team making an impressive comeback in the overall competition, it seemed like they were on track to take it all. Entering the second game, the Sun team lead the score right out of the gate and things began to seem shaky for the Wind. Lucky canteen number is 172. However, the Wind managed to turn things around and take the lead with a score of 20-17, meaning they only needed one person to cross for the overall win. CHARLIE EISENBERG was the one who stepped up to the plate, crossing the line the very next round and winning the game and competition for his team. Shout out to the Wind team for their phenomenal comeback and win in Sun and Wind this year!
